MATERIAL PRICING: The commodity lumber markets are struggling to regain momentum after a couple weeks of double digit corrections. SPF narrows posted the largest declines, with all species adjusting lower. Mills searched for trading levels to pull customers off the sidelines, but with little success. Market reports this week are indicating a possible leveling out, as most retailers have lean inventories going into a busy fall building season. Panel markets were mixed this week, with OSB and SYP plywood flat and Fir plywood off a few dollars. But this could change when rebuilding from hurricane damage ramps up in the next 30-60 days. As always, keep your bids current.
